About MIM

MIM began with a vision to create a musical instrument museum that would be truly global. Realizing that most musical museums featured historic, primarily Western classical instruments, MIM founder Robert J. Ulrich was inspired to develop a new kind of museum that would focus on instruments played every day by people worldwide. After all, in all places and across all time, what has more impact on people's lives and emotions than music?

In February 2008, construction of the museum began in Phoenix, Arizona, selected because of the city's strong tourism industry, increasingly diverse population and proximity to top national and international attractions. MIM opened on April 24, 2010 and was quickly recognized as a guest-friendly museum worthy of international attention. Designed by award-winning architect Rich Varda in collaboration with RSP Architects, the 200,000-square-foot building harmonizes with its natural setting, using materials, colors, and forms that evoke the desert landscape.

Today, MIM helps guests access the power of music and its lifelong benefits through its galleries, educational offerings and engaging programming. The museum's collection contains more than 7,500 instruments from more than 200 countries and territories, and through state-of-the-art interactive media, guests can see instruments, hear their sounds and watch them being played in their original contexts. Music and instruments show us what we have in common—a sentiment expressed in our motto — "Music is the language of the soul."

Among the 90 historic instruments presented in MIM's Acoustic America exhibition, we are especially proud and grateful to feature more than 30 special highlights from David Grisman's private collection.

About this project

When I discovered and fell in love with traditional American roots (particularly bluegrass) music, I also discovered and fell in love with the American-made "vintage" mandolins, guitars and banjos that were widely used to create those sounds. Of particular fascination were the pre-war Gibson F-style mandolins, Martin Dreadnought guitars (even Elvis played one) and Gibson Mastertone banjos, perfectly suited to rendering this perfectly orchestrated folk form. Back then, in the early 1960s, these instruments were fortuitously obtainable for less money than their "new" counterparts, and they sounded, looked and felt better!

In the ensuing decades, my interest and involvement with the music and the instruments grew ever deeper, and as I collected melodies, licks and notes, I became a collector of mandolins, guitars, banjos and even more unusual musical tools of an ever-widening, obscure trade — mandolas, manocellos, tenor lutes, banjos and guitars, and of course, mandolin-banjos.

In 2018, my Dawg Trio played at the Musical Instrument Museum and we were given a brief after-hours tour of this amazing environ. I met MIM's curator, Rich Walter, a very knowledgeable vintage instrument enthusiast who also appreciated my Acoustic Disc Tone Poems projects. Since that meeting, Rich and I have become great friends and now, with the launching of his brain-child, the Acoustic America exhibition, collaborators. When Rich asked me if I'd be willing to contribute instruments from my collection for the exhibit, I didn't hesitate in offering him (almost) carte blanche! And of course, I immediately thought of creating this audio companion to my part of the exhibition so you all can enjoy some of the sounds of Acoustic America!
